He was very good at explaining every topic we talked about. We covered a lot of material throughout the course, but he was able to make it all digestible and took the time to break down everything so that we could understand but also move at a rapid pace. He stayed very encouraging.
It was clear that the professor was very engaged with the source material. When the professor is engaged that also encourages the students to be engaged, so I consider that a good strength.

Early on the use of the word "um" was quite frequent likely due to nervousness but earlier on it detracted my ability to pay attention.
Maybe implement some more assignments? Honestly I love the way the course is structured so I'm not sure I have much to suggest Taking some time to discuss the earlier history of the Church. I am aware that the previous semester there was a course on early Church History, but it was not a pre-requisite for the class, so I feel like there should have been a day or two summing up the earlier history of the Church.

n/a i loved it
Maybe there could be some powerpoints related to topics we learned in class so that students can look back on them when they are doing required writings for the class.
Clearer guidelines for the worksheet research Honestly none. Great overall.
Maybe some visual aid outside of the reading portions would be useful, like PowerPoint slides to help follow along with the history lessons better.
I think the course was great. I do think that updating the Church assignments and organizing them in a way where its more of a group project would be beneficial.
none
provide incentives to visit a wide variety of churches for the church observation assignments provide incentives to complete the church observation assignments with classmates
He could work on speaking with pauses rather than using filler words like uh or um.
Slideshow presentations or general notes on lectures to refer back to in case of gaps in note-taking.

I think having a textbook to read outside of class as a supplemental material would be really beneficial. I love the way the class is structured but sometimes reading the information outside of class really helps you understand what you're learning in class even better.
Maybe adding a powerpoint/slideshow, just in the event that if someone is absent they can rely on that instead of having to frantically ask around to see what they missed.
None
I almost feel like the class could have a little bit more work. Maybe just some low stake quizzes to keep students motivated to learn the material.
More images or visual elements if possible n/a it was great
More powerpoints so students can take notes.
more specific guidelines for the research assignment
I would enjoy some optional additional videos/other readings to bolster our in-class learning
I honestly thought all the assignments were nicely done
I think all the assignments were organized well, and the structure of the class was good.
None
shift the discussion of missionization to before the first part of the global mission project
It would be more helpful to have 1 page of assigned reading prior to coming to class so that everyone is aware of what we will discuss that day

I believe I have improved in research skills, explaining and thinking through writing, and I have certainly grown in my understanding of church history.
Interpreting documents
I think this class has given me perspective on Christian history that has strengthened my knowledge not only of my own religious tradition, but also to understand the circumstances surrounding the emergence of other Christian denominations.
Thinking about connections across time and space in depth info about christianity. caused me to think very deeply about my own faith and strengthened it.
Reading primary sources together about the class topics with the professor and class.
reading analysis, comprehension, and application
I learned how to read and analyze primary sources, which will help me one day to read and analyze the law as a lawyer.
Being able to understand complex historical writings and the context/figures behind them.
More time reading is always useful.
I learned about Christianity throughout the beginning centuries understanding how it started, fostered, and grew. In this class the Professor taught how to read analyze and understand History in the bigger picture.
the evaluation of primary sources will be useful in future courses comparative analysis
Discussion participation is a skill. I learned to speak openly and listen to others speak openly so that we can share ideas with each other!
Making connections and thinking critically about the impacts that different movements had upon each other and the rest of history.
