INTRODUCTION

Teaching is a fundamental purpose of the University of Florida and the dissemination of new knowledge in our classrooms, studios, and clinics enables our students and trainees to fully explore their intellectual boundaries. Assessment and evaluation of our courses are designed to enhance instruction and maximize learning to meet the mission of the university. This report contains the results gathered through the new GatorEvals system. Students were invited to share their feedback on the teaching and course material. We invite every faculty member to examine the analysis in the report and utilize the resources provided in the report. Thank you for your continued great work!

Chris Hass, Ph.D.

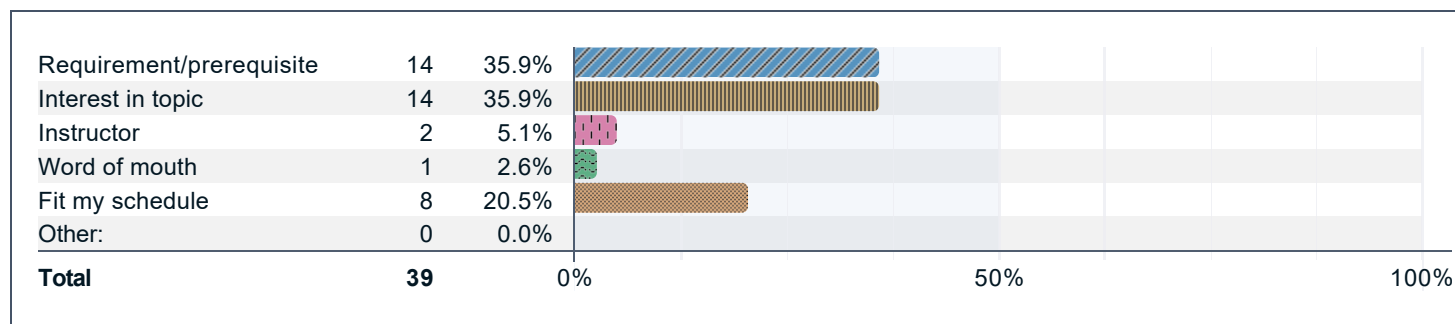

Associate Provost for Academic and Faculty Affairs

Professor Young was very knowledgeable about the course content and always took the time to answer students' questions. He was very respectful and encouraged discussion by telling students when they made good connections/analyses.
Professor Young was very good at getting the class engaged and fueling discussions among the class. The readings were extremely helpful for analysis purposes and for contextualizing the discussion.
Facilitated fantastic discussions that allowed me to understand the topic and connect it to readings. Mr. Young was also great at teaching us HOW to look at Christianity from a historic lens rather than merely telling us to.
Knowledgeable about the subject
Very open to discussion and debate, well thought out structure, good feedback on assignments
Professor Young was extremely knowledgeable about the course, was able to lead meaningful discussions amongst students, answer all questions in depth, and comment on potential shortcomings of the current knowledge of the topic.
Professor was great at answering complex questions about the different religious breaks within Christianity.
Great at fostering discussions.
Prof Young's ability to review the assigned readings with us and go over what we read the night before with his deep knowledge and understanding of the subject, was very influential and key for me to fully comprehend the material given. The reading questions were also very helpful as a guide for me when the readings got complex or long.
He was very passionate about the material and very understanding of your shortcomings and life situations
Strong ability to engage the class and facilitate discussion. He was also highly knowledgeable on the subject and made it fun to attend class each day.
I could identify that the instructor knew the topic well and exuded confidence in knowing the materials. His grading was extremely lenient which helped with the deadline demand of summer courses. He maintained a positive environment for a variety of questions to be asked and received them very well.
The most goated professor ever, 10/10 would recommend
Very easy spoken, very clear to understand, straight to the point
He is extremely knowledgeable when it comes of matters of Christianity and Church history. He is also well-versed in the documents we read in class, allowing us to properly retain, process, and understand the information given.
Prof. Young was very knowledgeable and diplomatic in addressing questions and major course themes. He is responsive and lets discussions progress fluidly, while maintaining focus on pivotal points. His assignments were relevant and incited broader engagement with the course's main objectives beyond the classroom.
You can tell Professor Young was very passionate about what he was teaching and made sure to keep every student engaged.
I really appreciate the active participation such as going out to the churches and writing the essays. I think the assignments allow for deeper reflection and provide context for the content we learn in class.
Fantastic Lectures with great management of the class. He was not uncomfortable with silent moments where the class didn't answer his question. Overall, made you want to participate in class. He didn't coerce you into participation

What additional constructive feedback can you offer the instructor that might help improve the course?

Maybe more variety for the assignments, though I understand that this was a condensed summer class.
It would be helpful to perhaps create powerpoint slides to give context on the readings as without them, only few students know the true context before the reading which can make the interpretation difficult to comprehend.
I had a really great experience with course materials, discussions, and assignments. No feedback or changes on my end.
I believe that the way class is structured makes it a little difficult to understand what is happening. Traditional in-class lectures would be more beneficial.
Maybe more assignments
I think that he should attempt to occasionally encourage those who are less participatory to contribute to the class discussions.
None, I loved the class and wish I had another semester to take another class with him.
I would have feedback to give if the course was longer but for the six weeks we had I think the course was structured perfectly. I only wish there was more time between the 2nd and 3rd papers.
I feel that the course is overly reliant on the socratic seminar style participation. I feel it needs a balance with more instructional lectures where we are being taught content with the socratic discussion.
Teach an additional course to these two! Amazing!
The course was run very "seminar" like (readings and discussion) which is fine if I knew that was what I was getting into. Usually that demands a level of comfortability with the subject. As someone not familiar with the Christian tradition and not a medieval historian this class was extremely difficult to jump into. Young has proven that he is capable of giving contextual knowledge/ "situational history" before starting open class discussion but it is too few and much too brief. In short— Young, lecture more! It helped to hear from his knowledge the historical significance before having to listen to my peers. He has a hidden talent to lecture but needs to give himself more justice and show it.
None, Bro's the goat
Maybe a PowerPoint while he lectures.
Honestly, I think this course was taught very well. I do not have any additional constructive feedback to offer to the professor at this time.
I feel as though the course would have benefited from a more lecture-based approach to increase engagement. This would also help to break down some of the larger themes and create points of recall for the main takeaways of the course.
no feedback, great professor!
I would prefer a mix of lecture and discussion. I didn't speak much during this class besides asking questions because I don't have a strong background in Christianity. The readings are very dense as well. I feel as if there were some lecture to supplement the discussions so we can have context, it would provide more engagement. Especially with religion overall being very sensitive to talk about, it didn't feel right to participate with the lack of knowledge I have about the historical events especially with the dense readings and discussions. There's a lot of figures like Queen Mary, Martin Luther, even certain popes, scholars and other Protestant leaders that were crucial during this medieval time that the readings talk about that require some level of context before hand.
We talked about it in class but the idea of maybe requiring students to approach the clergy for the church service Historization assignment would enhance an already fantastic assignment. My experience with talking with clergy was fantastic and helped me better understand the denomination.

What constructive suggestion(s) do you have for improving the course materials, organization, and assignments?

The organization was well done. It would be helpful to have more context beyond the readings.

Add 1–2 more assignments
I thought the materials were relevant and accessible.

I thought we could spend a little more time on the enlightenment era.
nothing at the moment.

The assignments were appropriate and I think a valuable tool to use (gives students reason to gain experiences).
None, the course was very easy to understand and super interesting
None really
I believe this course was structured very well and allowed for maximal educational growth. I do not have any constructive suggestions to give when it comes to the improvement of course materials, organization, and assignments.
I think the course would benefit from some more rigidity. I think some reading checkpoints or a few quizzes might facilitate more in–depth engagement with texts. Regardless, the format of the assignments was great and provided some insightful and useful experiences.
I think the way the class was set up is great. Just as I said previously, some lecture for context and background would be even more helpful. It doesn't have to be a whole presentation but maybe even some notes or just an outline of certain events as they pertain to each weekly subject would be nice for those who are not as exposed to the history of Christianity.

reading more primary sources
Postmodern Christianity was a very relevant and applicable topic. I think utilizing religion from a historical perspective will be very beneficial to teach in our department, especially with Mr. Young.
How to operate in a class with more readings than lecture.
Open discussion, reading and understanding classic texts as well as modern ones
Critical analysis
I learned a lot from the course, I knew very little about other churches and their views on the Christian faith. I grew up in a small town where everyone was Southern Baptist or Methodist so the ideas of the different denominations and the major churches like Catholic and Orthodox were new to me.
A better understanding of other people's religion and their practices
I worked on my writing skills and potentially made them better, I also became more disciplined when it came to reading assigned readings.

Discussion skills, document analysis, pushing my comfort zone, and writing skills
NA
What did I not learn, Gregorian reformation, protestant reformation, jesuits, martyrdom
One skill I picked up was the comparison of the different types of Christianity. I never knew there was this many varieties.
I have learned quite a lot of Church history from this class through the examination of primary course documents and church service attendance. The professor and the layout of this course has grown my intellectual appetite for this subject, hence allowing me to pay greater deference to the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic church. This professor and course has strengthened my interest and faith within the Christian religion, which is something that will stay with me forever and will only grow will time.
The sense of experiential learning in the course was impactful. I feel it encouraged me to witness and experience the themes of the course for myself, and not solely from the texts.
I think the best skill is going into environments one may not be familiar with to learn more and compare past events to how they have manifested in the future.
